

A story by Zachary Cresswell, age 5

One dark night some friends snuck out in their crazy golf rocket to a crazy golf planet. The friends were called Natalie, Joel, Jacob and Steve. They were going to a humans vs aliens competition. The aliens they were facing were called Blablablabla, Manadingo, Dookadakka and Doodadeedadee. On the first hole, Steve's ball went in the water because he did a crazy shot. Then its really terrifying, it's the aliens turn. Dookadakka had his shot. When all the humans saw this they said "Nooooooooooooo, the aliens have a hole in one". Moving on to the next hole, there was crazy alligators and crocodiles. They jump to try and get the ball. It was the aliens turn first. The aliens lost and the crocodiles and alligators got the ball. They couldn't get it back because they were real alligators and crocodiles and they tried to bite one of their eight feet. When the leg just touches the water it vibrates so the alligators and crocodiles swim after him. It's the humans turn now. Joel uses his craziness which puts the alligators all over the place. His ball hits them on the head then when it hits one on the head it bounces up into the air and goes 'weeeeeeeeeee' right into the hole. The third hole has every single hole up to one hundred holes. Theres only one real hole. All the others go into one tube and it spits them out back where they started. They looked everywhere and counted all the holes and said "huh, theres only 99?" but there was a secret hole on the wood above. There was a tiny launchpad where it launches the ball up in to the hole and then it glows up and traps the ball inside. Jacob is funny and clever because he has loads of really good skills that he never tells anyone about. He has really good eyesight so was looking for which hole looked suspicious. Then the corner of the top of his eye he noticed the top of the wood. He saw the launchpad and he went for it. Bounced. But it was the aliens go first. Then he heard whoever was in charge say it was the aliens turn first so he stopped his golf club instantly. So the aliens took their go first and Jacob wanted the aliens to go first because he was just pretending. Jacob had his turn and he went for the launchpad and it went into the hole. It was the fourth hole the decider. But suddenly they drew so Natalie had an idea to do rock, paper, scissors shoot. The alien audience shouts "THE HUMANS WON".
